COURSE DESCRIPTION

The medical profession since time immemorial has conducted itself with a high level of ethical behavior that has earned the trust that patients have in doctors today. Medical ethics is defined as a civil code of behavior considered correct by members of the profession for the good of both the patient and profession. This trust goes beyond written words and leads the public at large to expect the doctor to have not only a high standard of medical ability and skill but also impeccable behavior. The need for a patient's trust in his doctor is the basis for ethical codes from many centuries ago as manifested in the traditions of all the major civilizations. In recent times, national, regional and world associations of doctors as well as other health care professionals have revised existing codes of ethics and formulated new ones to keep up with advances in medical knowledge, medical practice, and research as well as changes in society. All doctors subscribe to the spirit of caring and confidentiality that regulates the doctor-patient relationship and these values continue to be accepted by all those who practice the art of medicine.

A new doctor entering the profession of medicine joins a fraternity dedicated to the service of humanity. He will be expected to subordinate his personal interests to the welfare of his patients, and, together with his fellow practitioners, seek to raise the standard of health in the community where he practices. He inherits traditions of professional behavior on which he must base his own conduct, and which he must pass on untarnished to his successors.

This course is an introduction to medical ethics. The first part of the course introduces basic ethical issues, codes & principles, which are intended to serve as a background aid for thinking through the issues discussed in the remainder of the course.
