Subject Overview

This course will analyze the economic rationale of Islamic values and Islamic laws in analysing economic activities. It will examine how Islam has contributed several alternative values to business and economic policies in several Muslim countries. Students will gain an insight into how Islam can be considered as a universal system that can be applied to economic policies, business strategies and government regulations. Students will gain a unique perspective into how Islamic values make a significant contribution to a dynamic understanding of the international business climate. This subject will also arm students with the skills to understand and apply the elements of Islamic economics to economic and business policies.

Classroom Protocol

Attendance is mandatory. Past experiences indicate that there is a strong and positive correlation between attendance and exam scores. The lectures will cover materials not all in the textbook, and you can save yourself a lot of time and frustration by showing up and paying attention in class. Furthermore, you will miss out understanding the assignments required from you.

Students should not carry conversations with each other, or talk to cell phones during class lecture and discussion.

Students are not allowed to read non-assigned materials.

It's the student responsibility to inform the instructor "a week" prior if there is a conflict with an exam.

It is forbidden to bring your mobile cell phone for calculation purposes. It is just allowed to use the calculator.

Disability

Students with disabilities or special needs are advised to discuss it with me at your convenient.
