Curriculum Vitae

TEACHING STATEMENT

As a professor and higher education leader, I have dedicated my career to promoting leadership excellence, strategic institutional development, and inclusive, student-centered pedagogy. My academic and administrative roles—such as Dean, Vice Dean, and Director of Admission & Registration—at institutions like The Hashemite University, Sultan Qaboos University and Umm Al-Qura University have equipped me with broad experience in academic leadership and planning. My teaching philosophy emphasizes critical thinking, ethical leadership, and experiential learning, encouraging students to connect theory with practical challenges through real-world case studies and collaborative work. I have taught and developed curricula at both undergraduate and graduate levels, covering topics such as Higher Education Administration, Organizational Theory, and Educational Leadership. In service, I have played key roles in curriculum development, accreditation, and mentorship. I am deeply committed to diversity, equity, inclusion, and belonging (DEIB), integrating culturally responsive practices in my teaching and administration. My work has addressed equitable leadership, institutional culture, and access for underrepresented groups, including leading accessibility initiatives and multicultural leadership workshops. I remain committed to fostering inclusive academic environments that empower all learners and support their academic and personal growth. My vision is to continue advancing student success, faculty collaboration, and community engagement through impactful teaching and service.

RESEARCH STATEMENT

My research program is dedicated to advancing the understanding and practice of effective leadership, strategic governance, and organizational development within educational institutions, with a particular focus on higher education in the Arab and global context. Driven by a commitment to evidence-based improvement, my scholarship seeks to diagnose systemic challenges, identify leverage points for change, and cultivate institutional environments that foster excellence, equity, and innovation. My work is characterized by its strong theoretical grounding, methodological rigor, and direct relevance to policymakers, academic leaders, and practitioners.

My research agenda is cohesive and interconnected, organized around four primary pillars:

1. Leadership and Governance in Higher Education: A significant strand of my research investigates the styles, competencies, and adaptability of academic leaders—from department chairs to deans and university presidents. My foundational doctoral work on leadership adaptability has evolved into studies on ethical leadership, strategic leadership 5.0, and the impact of leadership frames on institutional performance. I explore how leadership directly influences faculty development, job satisfaction, organizational health, and the successful implementation of strategic plans, such as accreditation and international ranking initiatives.
2. Organizational Culture, Climate, and Health: I am deeply interested in the "internal engine" of educational institutions. My research examines the factors that constitute a healthy, ethical, and innovative organizational culture. This includes studies on organizational trust, the impact of ethical climate on performance, and the effects of disruptive events—such as the COVID-19 pandemic—on institutional norms and practices. A key contribution has been the development and validation of instruments to measure organizational health in Arab educational contexts, facilitating cross-cultural comparative studies.
3. Strategic Planning, Quality Assurance, and Global Competitiveness: In an era of rapid globalization, my work addresses how universities in the region can enhance their competitiveness and align with national visions. My research delves into the effectiveness of strategic planning, the drivers of successful international accreditation, and the mechanisms for improving performance in global university rankings (e.g., QS, THE). This pillar is inherently interdisciplinary, linking educational administration with policy analysis and internationalization studies.
4. Innovation in Educational Leadership and Policy: My most recent work proactively explores emerging frontiers in the field. This includes investigating the role of Artificial Intelligence in school management and university teaching, the principles of strategic entrepreneurship and talent management in universities, and the development of leadership self-efficacy and civic identity among undergraduate students. This forward-looking dimension ensures my research remains at the cutting edge, anticipating future challenges and opportunities for educational systems.
